James J. Wadsworth, former United States representative to the United Nations; Eugene Lyons, author and editor; Prof. H. Stuart Hughes of Harvard University, and Col. William R. Kintner (U.S. Army, Ret.) will explore the vital question, "U.S. and U.S.S.R. Coexistence or Collision?" on the fourth and final program of the board of Freedom House in this season's "The Great Challenge" series. Eric Sevareid will again preside over the discussion, to be telecast from 10 to 11 p.m. on Channel 2.

The guests will survey the nature and present status of the conflict between the United States and Soviet Russia, the problems involved in dealing with it, and the prospects for the future — whether coexistence, collision or a course of action transcending either of these alternatives.

Ambassador Wadsworth is modern European history at president of the Peace Re-Harvard, holds a Guggenheim Research Institute and a member Fellowship, is a fellow of the American Academy of Arts and Sciences, and a national sponsor of the Committee for a Sane Nuclear Policy. His latest book, "An Approach to Peace," also will be published in May.

Colonel Kintner, a West Point graduate and combat veteran of World War II and the Korean War, is professor of international relations and political science at the University of Pennsylvania Foreign Policy Research Institute, and deputy director of the Institute. He has served with the CIA and the National Security Council, is co-author of "Protracted Conflict" and "A Forward Strategy for America" and author of "The Front Is Everywhere."

Lyons is a senior editor of Reader's Digest, former editor of Pageant and The American Mercury, and author of "Stalin the Czar of All the Russias," "The Red Decade" and "Our Secret Allies, the Peoples of Russia."
